

THE POCAHONTAS TIMES

Entered at the Postoffice at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

CALVIN W. PRICE, EDITOR.

THURSDAY SEPT. 14, 1922

The problem presented by the English statesman is: How can a mule be made strong enough to work, and too weak to kick. When this is solved it will be applied to Germany and the greatest of the world's problems will be answered.

About the time we got ready to start, (and by we I meant me and my consort) word came to go to the inland town of Parkersburg to meet with the Democratic State Committee, to make arrangements for the Democrats to carry the state of West Virginia this coming November.

Maybe they will let the Democrats hold another election some time or other. Let us hope so.

But there was another good reason for going to the sea shore and that was the hay fever which had ceased to be a laughing matter. The time had come when the thought of the raging sea was a small matter compared to a raging field of ragweed.

So it came to pass that I craved sympathetic companions and decided to go to the watering places of the earth where men do sit on porches and go in for symptoms.

A third class post office in Virginia, known as Virginia Beach, general delivery, was selected. The map showed that it was on the main shore. No placid bays for me.

On Tuesday, the orders in family council were to go up to the new ground for tomatoes. I went in a round about way and reached the patch safely and got a basket of the fruit of the vine.

I am a Virginian. It is no use to deny it. I was born on Muddy Creek at an early period of my existence. I am the kind of a man that Mark Twain speaks about—I come from Virginia and I am kin to an Injun.

I want to develop this Virginia descent of mine. It is about time that some of us came to the foot and began ascending. In the first place we were not devoid of sagacity in the beginning for at a very early period my family having been mixed with Indian blood, made a virtue of a necessity, and commenced to brag about it, and they got away with it.

One of the great schemes of Patrick Henry was to subsidize every white man who would marry an Indian woman and in this way assimilate the Indian race with the whites and put an end to the incessant warfare. This was about the time they were trying to educate the young buck Indians at William and Mary College, and not succeeding they were about as docile as that many wild cats.

Recently there has been published a work in four volumes on the life of John Marshall, chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. This is the work of Albert Beveridge, of Indiana, and it is one of the most valuable of all the historical works of America.

erson and John Marshall and a number of other old boys of the old days. But it seems from that book that Randolph under whose banner I have been rallying are of comparatively recent origin, not being able to trace back beyond the year 1550, whereas the Indians go back to 1424, so it is more important to establish the Indian connection than the Randolph line.

Col. William Randolph married Mary Isham. They had three sons: Thomas Randolph, the great grandfather of John Marshall, Isham Randolph, the grandfather of Thomas Jefferson, and Richard Randolph, who married Jane Bolling, the great granddaughter of Pocahontas.

So there is a fragment of our family tree. It never did me good to me, but I cannot help referring to it from time to time, but it goes better in Virginia than it does in these mountains where there is bred in the bone a distrust for the people of the lowlands who outvoted and outniggered them so long.

From my earliest recollection in the free masonry of the family circle I was taught to lay claim to this good inheritance as a birth right, and when I attempted to assert it abroad I found that it would not do, and that anyone who claimed to belong to an F. V. V. was sat down upon so hard that he would be driven to conceal a secret that amounted to terror of the subject.

But with the fullness of time has come the realization that all of our pioneer families are proud of their own heroic race and they do not yield one inch to any body on earth in the point of good blood and good breeding, so it suddenly occurred to me that all my life I have been bluffed off the boards by a lot of mountain aristocrats who are blue blooded and who live up to their birth and breeding.

It was a Virginian who claimed that men were the best products of his State, and there is no question that next to being an American, the proudest boast that any man can make is that he belongs to one of the two Virginias.

This is page nine of a penciled tablet written mostly on a moving train, and I wonder whether when I read it over, I will let what I have said heretofore stand. I know how to keep from mutilating this manuscript—I will not read it over. I have turned myself wrong side out too often to feel any sense of shame in divulging my inmost thoughts.

We took the down train Wednesday evening and at Caldwell got off to go round about Lewisburg to get the kind of supper that is set out at T. A. Sydenstricker's, and then we found that that retired farmer and his wife, known the world over as Tom and Blanche, would go with us for a week to relieve the monotony of life in one spot.

On the train we made acquaintances, for it seems to be that people travel in Pulmans for the benefits of society.

One man was on a very interesting mission. He was a lumber expert in the employ of the C. & O. Ry. His home was in Hinton. On Saturday he had finished the supervision of loading the steamship Honolulu with over a million feet of railroad ties, and refusing an invitation to go with the ship to Newport News, he hopped on a train and came by his home to meet the ship when it tied upon the dock.

The first night on the train I rested as well as could be expected and woke up the next morning with no hay fever. Tuckahoe cannot even support a case of hay fever. I was ready then to turn around and go home, but I was properly hooked and got to Richmond in time for an eleven o'clock breakfast at a fine hotel.
